a.ruQ: MongoDB 3.2.2 getting error when connecting to database via mongo shell I am trying to connect my ubuntu machine to my MongoDB server 3.2.2 mongod --dbpath /mongo/standby db.getSiblingDB("standby").hello I get this error '_bsontype' is not a valid field name for a collection. Use the correct field name instead. A: I faced the same issue and found the issue. It seems you are using mongo shell and so you need to specify db. Try mongo --db the_db_name. I'm facing the same issue. While I'm trying to start the mongod server I get this error message dbpath has been set to "/mongo/data", but this path is already in use. The solution is to restart the mongod server then only you will see the message "dbpath has been set to "/mongo/data", but this path is already in use" You have probably created multiple mongo instances, or a mongo instance with multiple databases. In your mongo shell, start typing use database_name_you_want_to_access; See more info here
